The farmer and his sons were in the fields, busy harvesting. There were already several hours that they worked under the scorching sun. Father Smith standing in the waggon, a prong in the hand pitched the heavy oat sheaves to one of his sons, who built a rick all near; more this rick grew, more it leaned towards the waggon, but it was unimportant. Father and son ^{not} ~~lost~~ ^{lost} their time ~~chattering~~ and nothing broke into the silence, only the rattling of the sheaves and some jest that they exchanged now and then. They had soon finished made finishing the rick; they stopped the work and they went to the farm for milking the cow and refreshing themselves
