The harvest.

The farmer and his sons were in the fields, busy harvesting. There were already several hours that they worked under the scorching sun.

X They had been already working.

Father Smith standing in the wagon, a prong in the hand pitched the heavy oat sheaves to one of his sons, who built a rick all near; more this rick grew, more it leaned towards the wagon, but it was unimportant. Father and son did lose <sup>not</sup> time chattering and nothing broke into the silence, only the rustling of the sheaves and some jest that they exchanged now and then. They had soon finished making the rick; they stopped the work and they went to the farm for milking the cow and refreshing themselves.
